Introduction

The first regulatory body of educational work in the North West Territories was the Board of Education which was established on August 6, 1884 by the "School Ordinance of 1884." At a later date the name of the Board was changed to the Council of Public Instruction.

This Council directed educational work in the North West Territories until 1901 when the Department of Education was established.

In 1901 the Department consisted of the Commissioner of Education, who was the head of the Department and a member of the Executive Council; a Deputy Commissioner, the Educational Council, which was an advisory body; and two branches. The Clerical Branch was in charge of administration within the Department and the Technical Branch consisted of the Superintendent of Education and school inspectors. The creation of the provinces did not alter the administrative organization of the department although there were changes in personnel and a reduction in geographic sphere of activities.

New appointments in 1909 included a Superintendent of Neglected and Dependent Children, who had supervision of the education and maintenance of deaf mutes and blind children. In 1912, a Superintendent of Education was appointed, with general supervision of the educational policies of the Department, and specific direction of such matters as Regulations of the Department, Courses of Study, Text Books, Normal Schools and examinations. Other new appointments, noted in the list of officials attached to the annual reports, included, in 1907, an Inspector of School Districts; in 1908, a Supervisor of Ruthenian Schools, with the title of this official changed in 1911 to Supervisor of Schools in Foreign-Speaking Districts; in 1912, staff appointments for the new Saskatoon Normal School were made, and in 1914 the office of Registrar was added to the Department.

In 1941, the Department established the Agricultural Instruction Committee to direct agricultural education. In 1917 a Director of School Hygiene was appointed, with a School Hygiene Branch remaining in the Department until May 1, 1928, when it was transferred to the Department of Public Health. A Teachers' Exchange was organized in February, 1918, but in February, 1922, was transferred to the Bureau of Labour and Industries. In 1919 the office of Supervisor of School Districts in Foreign Speaking Communities was replaced by a Director of Education among New Canadians, the latter office continuing until 1922.

By 1930 the Department consisted of a Minister of Education with two advisory bodies, the Educational Council and the Commission for the Education of Soldiers' Dependent Children; a Deputy Minister and the Registrar's Branch, School Organization Branch, School Attendance Branch, Saskatchewan Government Correspondence School, Rural Education Branch, Chief Inspector and Normal Schools.

These records of the Department of Education were transferred at various times to the Archives by gift and under authority of Order-in-Council as indicated in Accession Nos. P14, P15, P22, P29, P47, P50, P67, P73, P99 and P125. In 1965, the files concerning similar topics were brought together for ease of reference.

Some files were stripped when first received by the Archives and this is indicated either in the guide or by memoranda in the file written by the person who stripped the file. Most files are arranged chronological order could not be maintained because Department officials glued together correspondence on the same subject.

Wherever possible, the original file title has been retained. Although the Archives has imposed an arbitrary numbering system on the records, where a Departmental number is available, it has been included after the file title in square brackets.

The files of former teachers, 1926 - 1928, consisting of the academic and professional records of individual teachers (144 files), are subject to restricted access. Access to Board of Reference, Department Officials, Former Teachers, Personnel, and Conciliation files is also restricted. Permission for access to these files may be sought from the Provincial Archivist.

Addenda

These files were received after the material in the previous section of this guide was arranged. In a number of cases the G numbers have been continued by the Department for the same file title. Where this has occurred, the files have been allotted numbers in the addenda the same as those in the previous section. Similarly, files having the same title but a different number, or left unnumbered by the Department, have been integrated into the numbering system of the earlier section. Any files not fitting into the earlier section have been arranged in alphabetical order and numbered beginning at number 43. G numbers and special file numbers allotted by the Department have been written after the file title in square brackets. In a few cases, the same G number had been assigned by the Department to entirely different file titles. This set of files is not necessarily complete as is evidenced by "Part 4" of a particular file being transferred to the Archives but the previous three parts have not been transferred.

INTRODUCTION

The Saskatoon Normal School opened in the autumn of 1912 with Mr. J.A. Snell, M.A., principal. It continued as a separate entity until 1964, when its faculty was transferred to the University of Saskatchewan. The Teacher's College (as it was known after 1951) remained open until 1970, when operations were transferred to the campus of the University of Saskatchewan.

The records of the Saskatoon Normal School, comprising 1.5 meters of material, include administrative records and publications of the School as well as records of the School's branch of the Saskatchewan Civil Service Association. The bulk of the records was received by the Archives in 1970 and assigned Accession No. P231.

All materials are open for research, with the exception of student records. Permission for access to those records must be obtained through application to the Provincial Archivist.
